Pathways to Resilience

Rewire the Brain (RTB) is a training program based on the exciting new research on neuroplasticity: the concept that we can change our brains at any stage of life. The program aims to improve cognitive function, social and emotional skills, and capacity for self-regulation in young people aged 16-24 who have moved or are at risk of moving away from education and into long-term unemployment.

Cutting-edge brain training paired with a neurosequential model of social and emotional development will empower young people to reach their potential.

Coffee, tea, and juice accompanied by a snack will be provided from 5 pm and there will be an opportunity to network prior to the presentation.
